The Sunflower,

Prof. Wallace of Edinborough University.

How many times have we sung the praises of the sunflower, and we are glad to notice that agricultural journals all over the country are joining in the chorus. As to the value of the seed as food for horses and fowls, we have again and again proved its value. From a centemporary we learn that our Yankee cousins have discovered a useful field of service for the plant. It is well known that the sunflower is a great lover of moisture, and an ordinarily sized plant will perspire more than a pint of water in a day, which is passed into the atmosphere in an invisible form as water gas. The idea has therefore suggested itself that swamps could be drained by planting sunflowers and the experiment has been tried with much success. Not alone has swamps been drained, but malarial fevers which were so prevalent in the districts where experiments were made, have ceased to exist .-Planter and Farmer.

Alfalfa vs. Drouth. The man who has his farm, or large part of it, seeded down to alfalfa has the sinch on the dry situation. Wheat burns or dries up. Alfalfa grows. All other crops suffer for want of water-Alfalfa wants water, too, but not finding it on the surface, it goes down for it. It bunches right away, shades the ground, absorbs all the moisture afloat, and continues to grow. Dry weather, perhaps, checks its growth a little but not much, and nothing kills it. It comes up smiling every day, It's a revelation and a revolution. It will be ready to cut three times during the season. It is liked by all animals better than any other hay, and the price per ton, deliv-

There are reasons for believing that beef will bring a higher price inside of two years at furthest. In the first place consumption is steadily increasing with the population. Then owing to the last summer's drouth and the consequent shortage of water, pasturage and corn, the number of cattle forced on the market prematurely has been greater than ever before. Further, the increase in horse breeding on the western ranges tend to restrict the cattle business there. Now, when many are getting discouraged and quitting, is a good time to hold on to beef.— Kansas City Record.

SINCE the war the two great par ties have not had such an oppor tunity of meeting on a square and open issue as will be presented in the coming campaign. This issue has been laid down flat-flooted by the President himself indorsed by his party and accepted, as its policy. It is so simple that he who runs may read, and, when any man is either indifferent to or ignorant of the subject he is not deserving of the right of suffrage. The cold fact of the situation, says an exchange, is simply this: Shall we make foreign competition with our own industries a means of supplying the government with revenue, or, by removing this restriction permit foreign industries to overcome our own by a disastrous competitiou, which in the nature of things in this country, we can neither control nor withstand? The question is not a partisan one in itself, but Mr. Cleveland and his party have made it such by announcing free trade as the proper governmental policy. Were not the Democratic party a party of Bourbonism, it would consider the tariff for what it in reality is, an economic question, and not blindly rush in to indorse and uphold a policy which can but be ruinous to the country, simply because the Administration has

THERE is a fanatical sect in India, the members of which believe the way to serve Ged is to punish themselves. It is reported of them that they will stand with clenched hands until the nails of their fingers grow through the palms. They are the type of a class of men right here, men who have clung to a certain order of things here until their spiritual nails have grown through the palms, and they can not apparently extricate them-When Livingstone was about to plunge into the obscurity of the African jungles, he wrote back: "I will go anywhere, if it is only forward." That is a feeling understand. They seem to dread Monument Cemetery here, and not nothing so much as progress, and even the sexton knew who she was they do not realize that the world Since then it has been ascertained that

THE St. Louis Globe-Democrat save: It is indisputable that General Gresham is the only Republican candidate for the Presidency who is steadily gaining ground. The more he is talked about the bigger he looks. He belongs to that rare order of man who stand close ecrutiny and improve upon ac-quaintance. The Republican party has other able and popular statesmen, of course; but if the Chicage convention should conclude to give him the preference, there would be no cause for regret and no room for doubt as to his election.

OHIO and Indiana are eliminated from the list of "October" States. and with their elimination end all the exciting preliminary contests which have heretofore marked Presidential years. Vermont and Maine are the only two States whose elections precede the Presidential, and they are not debatable ground. The change is a loss of po-litical prestige to the States in question, but it is clearly in the interests of purity and cleanliness, and is a death blow to the corrupt practices and lavish expenditures of former years.

SYDNEY, May 20. -The Premier introduced in the Assembly a bill to restrict Chinese immigration, and amidst cheers the bill passed the third reading with only verbal amendments. The bill, which operates from May 1st, indemnifies the government for its lst, indemnifies the government for its past sets, prohibits the Ba uralization of Chinamen, allows steamers to bring one Chinaman to every 300 tons (Instead of one to 100 tons, as heretofore), raises the poll-tax from £10 to £100, and fixes the penalty for evasion of the law at from £10 to £50. Chinamen will be permitted to trade in defined areas, but the number in each of those districts must not exceed five. The bill also imposes restrictions as to residence and trading. London, May 21 .- The American Minister is somewhat indignant at having been imposed on in the prebecause the Administration has made it a Democratic issue. That there are intelligent men in the Democratic party who can see the evils to result from such a course may be probable, but they are in a hopeless minority and, in most instances so hide-bound in their political prejudices that they will support a policy and indorse a course that they know must result in calamity to the whole country.

Downieville May 21 .- The case of the People vs. Bartello Aroni has oc-cupied the Superior Court the last ten days. Detendant is charged with the murder of Francis Harland, Superintendent of the Pilgrim Mining Company. The case has excited considerable attention. The jury, after being out seventeen hours, came into court and announced its inability to agree, standing equally divided for murder in the first degree and acquittal. Death of Josie Mansfield.

BEVERLY, N. J., May 20 .- Last Sunwhich some of our people cannot day a woman was quietly buried in it was Josie Mansfield, who figured in it was Josie Mansfield, who figured in the Fisk-Stokes tragedy some years ago. It was said she died in Delanco, two miles below here. After the tragedy she fied to Paris, and when it had blown over she returned and selected an unpretentious home in Delanco, where she has led a quiet, secluded life since. Only five persons were at the funeral. The sexton was paid generously, secrecy being the only condition.

> Talk About Blaine.
> New York, May 20.—The Blaine leaders positively assert that under no circumstances will Depew permit his name to go before the convention, and he will be in Ch'cago himself, a delene will be in Ch'cago himseif, a delegate to enforce his wishes. They assert that Blaine will accept the nomination if tendered to him, although they produce no letter to back up the assertion. They claim that the strength of Depew, Harrison, Phelps, Allison, Stanford and almost all that of Sherman and Rusk, borrowed from Blaine will come back in the proper time, and whenever called upon.

New York, May 20.—L. Crawford, the London correspondent of the World, cables that journal to-night as follows: "I have seen Mr. Blaine saveral times within the last three days, generally surrounded by his family. As regards the question whether be would accept the Republican nomination for the Presidency, it can be said that Mr. Blaine adheres to his Florence letter and deer not to his Florence letter, and dees not withdraw one word of his interview last February in Florence. I have no authority to say any more than that, as Mr. Blaine did not wish to be inter-viewed again on the subject."

BOOMS AND BOOMS.

Excursions to draw people to a city are good things. The cheapall talk. So, we say, they are good schemes. But there is a way which counts more in the long run. That is when the citiz ns of a place decide that a certain enterprise is necessary to their prosperity; when they club together and raise all they can toward it, and, then, preparing everything needful to make the showing, send away some careful and enthusiastic citizeus to obtain what more is needed. For instance, says the Salt Lake Tribune. we believe that had this people, when the project of building the Salt Lake & Los Angeles railway was first mooted, have clubbed together and subscribed $250,000, then had prepared their maps and plats of surveys in good form, then have mapped half a dozen mining districts near the Nevada State line, taken these, with some reliable experts description of the principal mines, and given them to men of known business capacity, wealth and standon is enough to build the section between here and Nevada, they would without any noise and without much delay have raised the out much delay have raised the money, and by the first day of August of this year would have had the cars running, into Clifton District. The road would have had to carry just about 200 tons of freight daily at $5 per ton to have paid op-erating expenses at d interest on the money, allowing it to have no other business. It is safe to say it would have easily doubled that amount, and with such a showing amount, and with such a showing it would not have stopped in its progress a day until it reached the City of the Angels. We refer to this merely as an illustration. We say, without any reproach, that we should have done that last year. In nearly the same way the Wood river country should have been made tributary to this city half a dozen years ago. But what we are coming at is to ask But what we are coming at is to ask what the effect on this place would have been before this time, had this people pursued that plan? Had the road been started, under the immediate direction of the men of this city, and had it been started. city, and had it been made certain to people here and people coming here, that the road was to have its chief depot here, was going to carry coal and machinery and the food, clothing and miners' supplies needed in eastern Nevada, out, and was to bring in for reduction the ores in the low-grade mines of that region, would it have needed excursions to bring people this way? Hardly. We believe that it is not too late even now to carry forward this scheme, or rather it would not be if scheme, or rather it would not be if the will to do it was here. But the fact that it might have been and might still be, illustrates what we started in to try to make clear; namely, that the sovereign way to create a boom is not to stand on the housetops and call to the world to come, but to do such work that the eager and ambitious cannot keep away. We appreciate the difficulties which are in the way here. Only about one-third of the people are interested is seeing the town advance. The other two-thirds would rather see it remain stationary or retro-grade for ten or twenty years to come than to see it grow under any but their auspices, and it is a diffi-quit thing to build a city when two sets of people are disputing the right of possession to the site. We think the work accomplished, under the circumstances, has been marvelous; but the fact remains, nevertheless, that the very best advertising that ever a place receives is the work performed by its own people. When strangers see residents in dead earnest to accomplish an undertaking, it is human nature for them to want to take a chance. There are two kinds of booms. One ebbs and flows like the tide; the other moves on its steady way like a great river in its flow. This latter succeeds when a people show, by their works, that they feel entirely solid whether anyone joins them or not.

REPRESENTATIVE BARTINE

It is charged against Mr. Bartine our nominee for Congress, that he at one time fed a battery. His Democratic epponents took time by the forelock and set this ugly story afloat at once in order that it would have a chance to sink into the memory of the people, and would not, when revived, be regarded as a mere campaign lie. The worst of it is that the story is true, says the Enterprise. He committed the crime of feeding a battery instead of playing gentleman at the ex-pense of his friends, and it is even said that when he was employed in that occupation, which so unfits a man for political life, he fed the battery as best he knew how and gave entire satisfaction to the people who employed him. Every man has at times done something which he is sorry for, and it is only common charity to assume that the gentleman was sorry at the time that he could do no better, and to admit that, as soon as he could, he improved his position and gave antother man a chance to work in his place. He may have thought he was doing right; a great many people have an old-rashiened idea that it is perfectly proper to work for a living. Believing in the earnestness of purpose with which he must have fed that battery to cause the recollection of it to rise against him now, it would seem fair to believe that as a Congressman he will be equally earnest and industrious. But the battery-feeding is not the only crime with which his past is darkened. At one time he followed the dictates of his conscience, and on some local questions went into gave entire satisfaction to the peo-ple who employed him. Every man has at times done something which he is sorry for, and it is only

It is not reported that he threw over his party after being disappointed; simply that following his own views of right, he went into the party that at that time most nearly advocated them. After getting in it is also reported that he stood by his guns until the fight was over. He did not desert or betray his own side. Having learned his error he returned Having learned his error he returned to the party where he naturally belongs, because he knows it is the one which proposes to accomplished. These are the crimes with which he is charged, and they will tell against him in the Lemocratic ranks, for the Democratic party always looks backward. In the meantime the Republican party, knowing him to be trustworthy, will look at the

A Judicial Definition. It is related of Judge Toobigh Tooby) that when first he was elevated to the Superior Bench some papers were issued out of his Court and put in the hands of an illiterate Deputy Sheriff for service. They were indersed, and to be served on, were indersed, and to be served on, say, "John Dee, et al." The Deputy knew where to find John Doe, but didn't know the whereabouts of Et Al, and in his quandary went to the Judge, who was his particular friend. "What, sorr," said his honor, "not know the manio" of et al, and ye a sworn officer of the Coort?" "I'll inform ye, sorr, for your edification, that et al is a Latin word and signifies At-All-At-All; it manes, sorr, that ye must sarve the papers on John Doe and all his accomplices."—San Francisco Republican.

Accident to a Carson Valley

Peter Well, a well-known Carson valley rancher, met with a severe accident in Carson yegterday afternoon by file team running away. neon by file team running away. The horses became frightened and dashed away at break neck speed until brought to a sudden halt by running into a lamp-post in front of Chedic's grocery store. The lamp-post was snapped in twain, and Mr. Wolf, who retained his seat, was thrown by the jar of the collision, onto the dashboard, and sustained a severe gut over the right eve, a broken nose and badly cut lips. iand. Protection for America. Charles Dickens, Jr., has prove himself to be a man of more than ordinarily quick perception, one who gets to the meat of a proposition readily and reasons briefly and lucidly, but in such a striking and yet plain manner as to make every point tell. He was recently asked his opinion upon the tariff question, and he declared himself a freetrader in England and a protectionist in America. Said he: In England free trade is indispensable, for we can neither supply our manufactures nor support people from our own products. With you in America it is altogether different. Your great country produces almost everything except the laxuries for the few, and protection saves you from competition with the poorly paid laborer of Europe.

While the Justice was making out the commitment, Bill sauntered to the rear door, and watching his opportunity bolted out with the speed of a deer, and soon was lost to view. The constable incharge of the prisoners could do nothing but gaze at the fleeing fugitive, as he was afraid that if he gitive, as he was afraid that if he gave chase the other prisoners would make a dash for liberty through the front door. Unlike any other part of the town, this addition faces the beautiful Truckee River, and Riverside avenue is certain to become the fashionable driveway of the country. The streets are 80 feet wide, while Riverside and Keystone avenues are intended to be 100 feet in width. All alleys are 20 feet wide. The soil is a rich gravelly loam, and susceptible of the highest state of cultivation. Being situated as it is, it is more exempt from fire than any other section. The regular lots are 50x140 feet. reduces the price of labor and property, enriches the creditor; impoverishes the debtor, and paralyzes industry and enterprise.

That the present financial system of the United States, which increases or diminishes the circulating medium at the pleasure of the manipulators of the national banks, without regard to the increase of population or the wants of the people, and which recognizes gold alone as the standard of value, and places in the hands of the Treasury Department all the revenue of the Government to speculate with in bonds and loan to the national banks without interest, is subsersive of the rights of the people, oppressive, unjust and should be repudiated. That a financial policy whereby both gold and silver shall form the basis of circulation, whether the money used by the people be coin, or coin certificates redeemable in coin, or both, as convenience may require, is imperatively demanded.

That the attempt to substitute national bank notes, coating the Government millions of dellars annually, for free silver, coating nothing, is an outrage up in the people; that the money riag or trust, which has naurped the sovereign power of the Government to issue money, and which has fraudulently demonetized silver and selzed the revenues of the Government for private speculation, shocks the moral sense of the people and destroyed, and equal rights be restored to all the people.

We charge that President Cleveland is the willing tool or agent of a powerful money ring, which fattens on the subsidies of the Government, borrows the revenues raised by tration and uses them without the payment of interest, contracts the currency to enhance the value of bonds, and enriches nauvers, while it depresses the price of labor and property.

That we favor the nomination of no man for President who is personally interested in national banks or the bonded indebtedness of the United States, but we demand a candidate who is free to do justice to all the people of the country—the poor as well as the rich.

RESOLVED, That we are in favor of the protection of home industry, and that the laborers of this country have a right to all the work required to supply the people of the United States, and that we are in favor of high wages, and to that end will protect the wage-workers from competition with the cheap labor of other lands.

IV.

RESOLVED, That the policy of the Government should be inaugurated and established by the p ople through their representatives in both Houses of Congress, and not by the President or money trust, of which he, either as agent or head, is most active in defending.

V.

We charge President Cleveland with violating every promise he made in favor of civil service reform, with crippling the mail service, with refusing to sign necessary bills for the improvement of rivers and harbora, with using the power of his administration to prevent appropriations for navy and coast defenses, with attempting to destroy the protective tariff, with courting the good will of other nations at the expense of the citizens of the nited States, and with joining the foreign bondholders to demonetize silver and destroy the industries of his own country, and for the reduction of the wages of the flint employes at Carson, for closing the Carson Mint when it was not only self-nutslining but a source of revenue to the Government, for his contemptaous vetoes of bills for the relief of disabled soldilets and sailors, and for failing to construct the Government build ng at Carson as required by law.

We favor the reduction of the reasury surplus by the payment of pensions to Union soldiers, their widows and orphans, the improvement of rivers and harbors, the building of defences for the sea coast, the erection of public buildings, the creation of any, the parchase of bonds and the repeal of the internal revenue laws taxing tobacco.

It is the duty of this State to maintain free, non-sectarian schools in the rural and aparsely sattled districts, as well as in towns and thickly populated sections, and that such division of the school money shall be made as will furnish the means of education to all children of the State.

THE LESSON.

"Now, Kitty, I think you're a little unreasonable," said Julian Price. And he spoke it in the tone which always means, "You are very unreasonable, in-means, "You are very unreasonable, indeed."

Kitty stood in the bay-window, watering a little stand of ferns, which was her special delight—and just one tear dropped down among the silver-green spikes as her lover spoke. Kitty St. John was a fair-faced, little brunette, with curly black hair, eyes as soft as a June midnight, and fresh, crimson lips. Julian Price was tall, with flaxen hair, just inclined to wave; frank, blue eyes, with long lashes, and a face which would have been faultlessly handsome, were it not for the slightly retreating form of the chin, which betokened a degree of irresolution in the young man's character. He waited a minute or two for Kitty to speak, but she still kept silence.

"A man must do as others do when he's out in society," persued he. "And what earthly harm can a glass of champagne do?"

"Hear Julian" pleaded the girl. "If pagne do?"

"Dear Julian," pleaded the girl, "if you love me as truly as you pretend to do—"

"As I pretend to do?" angrily burst forth the young lover.
"As you say you do, Julian," Kitty corrected herself, "you will not hesitate to grant me this one boon. For I have solemnly made up my mind to marry no man who drinks, be it but one glass of channeste."

man who drinks be it but one glass of champagne,"

"Now you are threatening me," Julian cried out." "Kitty, this is hardly a tone ito adopt towards your future husband."

"Indeed; indeed, you misunderstand me," persisted kitty. "I know that on mo t subjects—nearly all—you are wiser, better informed than I. But there are some things, Julian, in which a woman's instinct is truer than all the wit and learning in the world—and this is one. You are going to this masquerade tonight, where every temptation will surround you. Now, before you leave me, pledgy yourself, dear Julian. Promise me that you will religiously abstain from even one glass of champagne."

He turned sullenly away from the pleading light of her soft eyes.

"I am not a baby to bind myself with foolish promises."

"I am not a baby to bind myself with foolish promises."
Her hand fell from his arm—a shuddering sigh parted her lips.
"Then good-by," she said, softly.
"You are not in earnest in this fanatical business, Kitty?" he exclaimed.
"Most assuredly I am in earnest," she responded.
And so they parted.

And so they parted.

Julian Price tried to think that he had behaved like a man and an independent ment agent.

"Kitty is a dear little jewel of a girl," he reasoned within himself: "but no woman ahve has the right to bind a man by a network of silly pledges. Has she no conti lence in my self-control and common sense? Does she regard me as only a child in leading strings? I shall go there to-night and conduct myself precisely as do others of my age and standing. I shall eat and drink in moderation and prove to Kitty that I am no schoolboy. If she is disposed to resent it, why let her."

So Mr. Julian Price assumed the gorgeous dress of a Spanish cavalier and went to the masquerade, looking very handsome in black velvet, gold lace and a hat crested with a long white plume.

But close at his elbow gided a figure all in white, with white satin mask and a veil wrapped loosely about her—the White Lady of Avensi.

"I wonder who that is "' thought Mr. Price once or twice. "She haunts a fellow like a shadow! But, of course, in a place like this, one can't help encountering the same costume once or twice in the course of an evening."

Miss Lucilla Egerton was there, the brilliant daughter of a Wall street broker, in whose office Julian Price had a deak. Miss Egerton was dressed as "Lady Gay Spanker," as piquant and dashing as the illustrious original of the play—and Mr. Price found himself nearly forgetting Kitty St. John once or twice, as he waitzed with "Lady Gay," in an off-hand sort of manner. "Waltzing makes me so warm."

"Get me a glass of champagne and a bit of lobster salad, there's a good fellow," said "Lady Gay," in an off-hand sort of manner. "Waltzing makes me so warm."

"So Julian obeyed.

"Really," said Lady Gay," this champagne isn't bad. I wouldn't mind a little more."

"Well, you may if you please," said Miss Egerton. And this time Julian Price drank the young lady's health. Not that he was a free agent.

"Isn't it nice?" said Miss Egerton was forced to believe that Miss Egerton was Price liked to see her.

"Shall I order your carriage, now?"
he asked, toward the close of the evening, when Miss Egerton was attracting considerable attention by her voluble wit and load laughter.

"Order my carriage! No. What for?"
The fun is only just commencing."

And it was late in the evening before
Miss Egerton would consent to accompany her motified and indignant mother home.

As Indian Price stood mades the com-

Miss regerion would consent to accompany her motified and indignant mother home.

As Julian Price stood under the awning which was stretched from the house to the curb-stone, watching the carriage out of the lamp-lighted square, a young man, of about his own age, came staggering along shouting out the refrain of some popular ballad. The old servant, who bad come down to open the carriage door, grinned broadly.

"It's young Mr. Delamere," said he, in a confidential whisper, to Julian. "Dear, dear, it ain't a year, hardly, since Mr. Delamore was here, just as you've been to-night, sir. There wasn't a hand-somer, livelier young gent a goin', sir—and every one had a good word for him. But, lack-a-day, thines changes. He got to drinkin' too much, along of parties and balls and lost his place in the bank—and so he got to be the wreck you see. There he goes, sir—and he'll end in the station-house afore morning. Gone to the bad, sir, gone to the bad! And there't too many young gent's goin' the same way. I'm only a servant, sir, but I can see it as well as if I belonged to the gentry!"

So the man went back into the house, next morning, trying to read, trying to embroider, trying to busy herself with her piants and flowers and succeeding very indifferently with all three. For through every simulation of industry came one overweening consciousness—one great vacuum in her heart. Julian Price had bidden her farewell—Julian Price would come no more.

For Kitty had dearly loved the man from whom Principle had parted her. Bravely as she had chosen her part, it had been like tearing the quivering fibers out of her heart and the stinging wound remained.

She took his photograph, framed in velvet and gold, from the mantel and studied his face through eyes that brimmed over with tears.

"Good-by, Julian—my Julian," she whispered, softly. "I shall never see you again, and my heart sches sadly, although I know that I have done right."

As she turned to replace the picture on the mantel, a hand fell lightly on her arm.

"Kitty!"

on the mantel, a hand fell lightly on her arm.

"Kitty!"

"Julian! can it be possible that this is you? Oh, Julian; I am so glad to see you," and Kitty flew into his arms.

"Yes, Kitty, it is I. I have come back to you to confess—no easy task, for a man's lips to frame, my darling—that you are right, and I was wrong. I have come to pledge myself never again to to touch a drop of wine or liquor of any sort. Will you take me back to your heart, Kitty!"

And her sweet syes answered him.

"But you did not know, Julian, that I howared near you all last evening—that I prayed for you in the hour of temptation—that—"

"My guardian angel!" he murmured.

"No, Kitty, I did not know it; but suspected you were the White Lady of Avenel."

"I was."

So Kitty St. John's true woman-heart tripmenhed and she was beanny again.

So Kitty St. John's true woman-heart triumphed, and she was happy again. And so may every woman-heart triumph that has courage to wait, and trust, and pray.
